What should I already know?

- Paints are wet and come in different colours
- I can paint a picture

What I will know by the end of the unit

- Watercolour is a type of paint.
- Turner is a famous artist who use watercolours.
- Watercolour paints need water adding to them to use them.
- Some watercolour paints are blocks of dried paint.
- The more water that is added, the lighter the colour of the paint.
- You can make a colour darker by painting layers of the same colour but each layer needs to dry first.
- The colours made by watercolour paints are thinner than other paints.
- Watercolours can run together because they are wet.
- You stroke the brush on the paint and on the paper.
- Different brushes put the paint on in different ways.
- You can create different strokes and effects with the brush.
- I will experiment with watercolour paints.
- I will use watercolours to paint a Newport building.
