Fiction texts always have a beginning, middle and end.

Let's recap the story of Sophie's Spectacles...

Did she go on an adventure? Sort of!

1. 2. 3. 4. 5. 6.

This morning we will plan our own spectacle story. Think back to the two designs you picked on Tuesday!

When you put on your glasses they give you a magical power and take you somewhere....

Let's look at each part of our plan:

Who do you meet? What happens to you? Do they give you a special power or skill?

Where do you find your second pair of glasses? What do they look like?

Middle

Where do your glasses take you? How do you feel?

Where do they take you? What happens to you?

Beginning

End

Where do you find your first pair of glasses? What do they look like?

How do you get home?

Every story needs a good beginning!

You can start your story at home...

Story plan - You don't need to write full sentences!
Draw pictures or write words/phrases

What happens next?

Session 2

Beginning, Middle or End?

Where would these sentences appear in a story? Why?

Behind the rocks I crouched down and hid, silently.

I panicked and quickly ran all the way home!

One sunny morning I noticed something sparkly sitting on my wooden desk.

How is your story going to start? Let's write some ideas together...

Tricky Words

It was Sunday morning and I looked out of my window to see the cold dew was just beginning to melt on the grass. As I began to think about the sweet, yummy pancakes Daddy was cooking for breakfast, I suddenly noticed a shining light coming from the garden shed. What could this be? Where was the light coming from? Daddy didn't usually leave the light on! I had to go and see for myself so I quietly tiptoed down the stairs, through the cold, dark hallway and out of the back door. As I quietly crept closer toward the garden shed it soon became clear that the light was beaming from a glittering, golden pair of spectacles. They were shining as brightly as the morning sunrise. What a delight! I cautiously put on the spectacles and closed my eyes.

The sound of booming drums and rattling guitars filled the air and I opened my eyes to see that I was on stage at Wembley Stadium!
